Urban Studies is an interdisciplinary field in the Social Sciences, with connections to the Humanities and the Natural (Earth) Sciences. The minor is designed in relation to the UvA’s Urban Studies Research Priority Area and draws upon the research and teaching expertise of its staff.

The growing importance of Urban Studies is reflected in, for example: the rapid acceleration of urbanization world-wide (esp. in China, India, and elsewhere in the Global South); the transition to an information economy that is primarily embedded in urban areas and the emergence of 'world cities' and the main nodes of a global urban network.
This minor consists of 24-30 ECs. Students must take two interdisciplinary core courses that are specifically designed for the minor: Cities and Changes (ASW) and Perspectives on Amsterdam (ASW). These two core courses introduce students to the field of Urban Studies with a range of empirical cases and an array of basic concepts (e.g. urban system, urbanization, globalization, urban diversity, segregation, gentrification, global economies, etc.). The two required courses for the minor are complementary: one highlights the urban from a very general, global, and broad historical perspective, while the other focuses concretely on Amsterdam. The first provides theories and models on the variations in urbanisation, while the second allows for in-depth study of a single case with direct empirical observation and experience. After completing the two required courses, students must choose at least one of the following courses: Contesting the City (12 EC, sem 1), Placemaking: estafette voor stadsmakers (12 EC, sem 1, IN DUTCH), Urban Planning: Building the City (12 EC, sem 2); Urban Planning: Moving the City (12 EC, sem 2). To complete the minor with 30 EC students can choose between the courses Urban Places – Urban Problems (6 EC, sem 1), The identity of the City in Latin America (6 EC, sem 1), Capstone interdisciplinary literature review (6 EC, sem 1).
