Research Statement

My research focuses on the cultural economy of neoliberalism and neoliberal policies. It studies the multiple ways in which economic metaphors and the image of the market perform neoliberal political rationalities. My recent research focuses on the performative aspects of economics and economic discourse. It traces the changing ways in which economic knowledge are shaping contemporary political and cultural imaginaries, as well as the emergence of novel counter-discourses.

Areas of Specialization: Cultural Economy, History and Philosophy of Neoliberalism and Post-Neoliberalism, Governmentality, Discourse Theory, Rhetoric of Science, Political Economy, History of Economic Thought, Science and Technology Studies.
